

A Historical Outline on Villa Spalletti Trivelli

Gabriella Rasponi, widow of Count Venceslao Spalletti Trivelli, Senator of the Kingdom, niece of Gioacchino Murat and Carolina Bonaparte (Napoleon's sister), purchased the land in front of the gardens of the Quirinale, where the house of Tito Pomponio Attico, editor and friend of Cicero, was located and entrusted the task of building Villa Spalletti Trivelli to Architect Domenico Avenali (who used the help of various artists and artisans, like Edoardo Gioja).

Thanks to the intelligent awareness of Countess Rasponi, President of the National Council of Italian Women, Villa Spalletti Trivelli becomes an important political and cultural masterpiece. Every Thursday afternoon, the villa's drawing rooms were filled with important people of the time, including Romualdo Bonfaldini, Sidney Sonnino and Rabindranath Tagore, the Nobel prize winner for literature in 1913.

At the beginning of the 1930s, Cesare Spalletti Trivelli inherited a historic residence in downtown Rome from his mother where he lived with his wife, Contessa Guendalina Cavazzi della Somaglia. Appointed Sir and Lady of the Court of Queen Maria Josè of Belgium, wife of Umberto II of Savoia, the last King of Italy, the count and countess left the Villa to their son, Piero, a writer and poet.

In 2004, Giangiaco Spalletti Trivelli, son of Count Piero, and his wife, Susanna, daughter of the horseback riding champion, Raimondo d'Inzeo, decided to convert the family's historic residence into an exclusive luxury residence for the most refined and demanding travelers.

After three years of restorations thanks to the help of Architect Piero Alessandrini, Villa Spalletti Trivelli became a unique and exclusive hotel in the historic center of Rome, where the Spalletti Trivelli family's passion for history, culture and art along with the most modern technologies put the Villa on the same scale as a luxury hotel, avant-garde for its comfort and amenities.

LOCATION

Villa Spalletti Trivelli is situated in a fascinating neighborhood on one of the oldest hills on which the ancient Rome was built: just steps from the Piazza del Quirinale, and only a five-minute walk from the Trevi Fountain: which became world famous in the film “La Dolce Vita”, starred by Marcello Mastroianni. Overlooking the Piazza is the Quirinal Palace, the Seventeenth Century residence of the President of the Italian Republic (the former residence of the Pope). Nearby Villa Spalletti Trivelli you will also find two gems of Baroque architecture in Rome: Bernini's Chiesa di Sant'Andrea al Quirinale and Borromini's masterpiece, San Carlo alle Quattro Fontane. The Villa is also in the heart of Rome's shopping district: Via del Corso and Via Condotti, with their store windows and showrooms full of Italian and international designer labels (Bulgari, Valentino, Ferragamo, Cartier, Armani, Dolce & Gabbana, etc.). A fifteen minute walk from Villa Spalletti Trivelli brings you to the ancient Rome of the Via dei Fori Imperiali. There you can admire the fascinating, centuries-old vestiges of the Forums and the Colosseum, the imposing amphitheater, symbol of the Eternal City. Politicians, business men and women who choose to stay at Villa Spalletti Trivelli are only a few minutes from the Viminale (offices of the Ministry of the Interior), the Ministry of Defence, the Constitutional Court, the Bank of Italy, and many other public offices, consulates, and companies of international significance.
